To whom it may concern

We engaged RPM to project manage the construction of our new 1,000m2 apartment on Princes Wharf, which was provided to us as a bare shell.

The role required RPM to work closely with the base building contractors and the architects, Leuschke Architects and the interior designers, Martin Hughes Interiors, from the very early stages. They handled this well in what was a pressure cooker situation of conflicting interests.

The interior fitout was extensive and the design detailing was complex requiring close attention to detail during the construction process. We decided to run the project as a labour only contract which RPM administered to a high standard and ultimately achieved superbly.

After the completion of the apartment we utilised RPM again for the construction of a new home at Leigh, north of Auckland.

Our experience with RPM and with the personal service and attention provided by Greg Robbins means I would not hesitate to recommend them.
